They seek to improve health, nutrition, sustainability, and prosperity around the world.

Powered by the sun

UC Riverside’s new solar farm provides up to 6.6 million megawatt hours of electricity each year, the equivalent of powering 960 homes. Thirteen on-campus solar tables provide a clean, renewable source of energy. Students can dine and study at these café-style tables, while charging their mobile devices.

Fueling the world

In the CE-CERT Hydrogasification Laboratory, researchers are looking for alternative fuels made from agricultural and forestry residues, solid waste, and low-cost grasses and wood.

Feeding the world

UC Riverside scientists and students are seeking ways to breed pest- and drought-resistant cowpeas for farmers in famine-stricken Africa.

Google and more

Research in the humanities, arts, and social sciences includes groundbreaking studies on happiness, a Google grant to improve descriptions of books published before 1801, and the addition of Google Books to a 600,000-document catalog.

Sustainability at UCR

UCR is committed to going green and preserving the earth for future generations. Visit sustainability.ucr.edu to find out more about how we do it, and to get involved.
FACULTY

At UC Riverside, we give faculty the tools they need to make a difference in our world. Engineering professors are developing devices that can “hear” cancer, geochemists are discovering traces of oxygen that appeared 50 to 100 million years earlier than previously thought, and researchers in varied fields are breaking new ground every day, such as:

Matt Barth, professor of electrical engineering and head of the Bourns College of Engineering Center for Environmental Research and Technology (CE-CERT), is directing 80 scientists and five research groups on various topics including the use of technology to reduce pollution.

Cheryl Hayashi, professor of biology and vice chair, is a national expert on the genetic structure of spider silk, and received a “Genius Award” from the prestigious MacArthur Foundation.

David Lo, distinguished professor of biomedical sciences, is working to develop a painless, needle-free vaccination that could help people around the world avoid such common illnesses as the flu.

Robert Nash Parker, professor of sociology, is one of the United States’ foremost leaders in documenting the connection between drugs and alcohol and the prevalence of crime, violence and anti-social behaviors.

INTERNSHIPS AND JOBS

UC Riverside’s Career Center helps students explore the working world with internships and job search tools. Our staff guides students through the process with workshops, networking opportunities and career fairs with prospective employers, a resource library, and online sources.
